Join P.K. Yonge and the Center for the Collaborative Classroom for a professional learning series dedicated to:

- Discussing issues of practice
- Observing lessons
- Collecting evidence of student thinking and behavior
- Debriefing and analyzing data
- Discussing implications for improving teaching effectiveness

February 16, 2017 --- 8:00am-2:30pm

Registration Deadline: February 2, 2017

Research in Action days assist classroom teachers and educational leaders in thinking deeply about their instructional practice. A unique professional learning experience, participants directly observe teaching practice, interview teachers about their approaches, and learn new strategies. In our quest to find answers for our own students, we share our successes, our challenges, and our questions with Research in Action participants.
